

Empowering Vocational Education students

Students from 15 Vocational Schools located in both urban and remote areas in Greece have the chance to participate in the Tipping Point program during the school year 2022-2023, through the project “Empowering Vocational Education students”.

The program aims to enrich the technical training vocational schools offer to their students, thus providing an even deeper understanding of technical jobs through the experiences and advice of successful professionals, who act as mentors.

The students can, in an interactive way:

- discover the job opportunities and alternatives in their selected field of study
- develop the required skills as early as possible
- learn more about the everyday life of their future profession
- connect with the job market through networking with its representatives.

The project is implemented for the second consecutive school year with the support of the John S. Latsis Public Benefit Foundation, as part of its strategy focusing on supporting, among others, empowerment programmes addressed to Vocational Education students.
