

“TechTalks for students”

In the job market, digital literacy is an urgent need for young people regardless of the field of work which they will pursue in the future.

During school year 2021 - 2022, students from Secondary schools will have the opportunity to interact with professionals who have knowledge and experience about the digital world, in order to get informed for:

- the wide range of professional choices in computer science and programming,
- the skills which are required for this field, as well as the ways in which they can develop them.

The project “TechTalks for students” is implemented with the support of INTRASOFT International.
