

The John S. Latsis Public Benefit Foundation supports Vocational Schools in Greece.

Students from vocational schools of both urban and remote areas of Greece have the chance to participate in the Tipping Point program during the school year 2021-2022, through the project “Empowering Vocational Education students”.

The program aims at adding to the technical training vocational schools offer to their students, thus providing an even deeper understanding of technical jobs through the experiences and advice of successful professionals, who act as mentors. Via the program, the students can discover the job opportunities and alternatives in their selected field of study, develop the required skills as early as possible and enter the job market through networking with its representatives.

The project “Empowering Vocational Education students” is implemented with the support of the John S. Latsis Public Benefit Foundation.
